Wrap up session

Teaching and learning of art in higher education (at university level) has experienced significant and challenging cultural, technological, societal and economic changes. The Perspectives on Art Education Symposium will address these changes; explore their antecedent approaches and search for meaningful explanations and responses, as they are relevant for teaching and learning studio art and art education today.

The symposium discusses and explores critically the various perspectives of the artist in current society, the necessity for new strategies of teaching and learning and the diversity of art education across different nations and art schools.

An exhibition of artworks responding to the theme of the symposium introduces to further aspects on art education.
